

Stakeholder Involvement in Projects - Best For Everyone

If you want projects that really deliver the benefits they promise, install and commission smoothly in operating environments and benefit the long-term competence of the organisation, then getting stakeholders involved from the outset is key. This requires commitment and skills not always seen as traditional project team behaviour. However, the long-term rewards (both financial and organisational) far outweigh the expediency of letting projects be 'done' to you.

